UNSPOKEN.

When you owe a favor money,
It is always kind of funny
How you'd just a little rather than you didn't chance to meet.

Of course you mean to pay it,
And you know he wouldn't say it
If he even got to thinking you a trifle indiscreet.

You know he wouldn't bone you
For the temporary loan you Unthinkingly asserted you would very promptly pay.

But, though cordially you greet him,
It is true you never meet him,
But you wonder if he's thinking of the things
he doesn't say.

Though you grasp his hand with ardor,
Though you grip it hard and harder,
You'll still be sadly conscious of a something in between.

Of a something intervening,
Of the wish he greets the meaning,
For you know it's but the spirit of the cash he hasn't seen.

MY LUCKY FIND.

I was almost in despair.

What a lot of trouble I have brought on myself for my good nature! Police investigations and reports, annoyance, chagrin, perhaps, at the outcome. Yes,
it was enough to make a man swear!

And the cause of it all was Baby Mouse, hapless Baby Mouse! But, before you, dear reader, will understand why Baby Mouse should be to blame you will want to know who he is. It's a strange story, and yet sweet and tender withal. And it ends well—that's its best part.

Three months ago I was coming home with the evening shades. It was bitter cold, and I rejoiced in anticipation of my cozy, warm home and the simple,
dainty meal which my old housekeeper,
Johanna, knew how to prepare so well.

I was lost in just such comfortable bachelor reverie, when I descended from the L road to wind my way toward my little Washington Heights home. I walked rapidly and soon reached there.
Opening the iron gate that led into the tiny garden path in front of the house,
I saw a small package lying on the frozen snow.

"A present from somebody," I said half aloud, stooped and picked up my find. My hands, a bit numb with cold, despite my fleece lined gloves, had scarcely grasped the bundle when it began to kick and squirm. Nor was that all. It raised such lusty howls that my neighbors' windows flew up, and they stuck out their heads to see what it meant.

It would have done me good to see my face just then in a convenient mirror.

All the nursery tales of cry babies and bewitched castaways came to my mind with a rush. I felt like depositing the lively packet in the place where I had found it, but that would have been cruel.

Aye, it would have been worse than murder to leave such a little mite out in the open with the thermometer at 10 above zero. I had no desire to make the acquaintance of the state attorney.

But, better than all, great pity swelled
my heart for the unfortunate creature whose loneliness had cast away, and as fast as I could run with my burden I ran into the house. Johanna met me in the door.

"See what I have brought you," I said, with a laugh.

The good woman gazed with horror
on the squirming, shaking babe and held out her hands.

"Doctor, what does it mean?" she gasped.

"It means, Johanna, that for the next few days you're going to bathe and feed and fondle this little waif, just as you did one upon a time."

And then I told her the story of how
I had found Baby Mouse.

In the lamplight I examined the little foundling, and Johanna, too, looked him over with critical eyes. He was a jolly little youngster, 6 months old perhaps, with chubby face, eyes as blue as a summer sky and lips that soon took on cherry hue, as their blue, pinched look died away in the genial warmth of the room and Johanna's embraces that alternated with mine.

Johanna brought out fresh linen, arranged a bed and bathed and washed the foundling. Tucking him comfortably away in an improvised crib, she gave him a bottle filled with milk, and when he had appeared his hunger, he fell into a peaceful slumber. I kissed
the baby's brow and said to Johanna:
"I am going to report that case to the police in the morning, and I'll ask them to let me keep the little one until his relations are heard from."

Johanna gave me an amazed look.

"My life is so lonely," I continued,
"he may bring some color into it!" I may have sighed as I walked away.

"You haven't forgotten, doctor," answered the good woman, "no matter how hard you've tried!"

Next day I went to the chief of police. He recorded the case and had no objection to my keeping the baby. This is the way I came into possession of a lovely and beautiful child. Johanna and I decided to call him Robert, but his pet name—Baby Mouse—was older than that, and it clung to him.

And now you know who Mouse is.

Nobody ever came to claim him, and my heart opened to the tender waif as it had never opened before.

Mouse, of course, was treated like a king. Now and then Johanna would say, "You are spoiling the child, doctor!"
But she was as weak as I with regard to Mouse.

He grew and prospered like a flower in the sunshine of our love and was the lustiest youngster on the block.

But there must be rainy days as well.
One day Mouse was taken ill, and before night we knew that he had been attacked with diphtheria. With flaming cheeks and trembling hands he lay in his crib, and I bent over him with breaking heart. Long nights of anxious watching followed. At last care and tender nursing drove death from the door, and the doctor told me that the danger was passed. But another blow came severer even than Mouse's illness.

My old faithful servant had caught the infection and had to take to her bed.

There I was, a helpless man, with an ill woman and a convalescent babe on my hands.

Surely it was a desperate situation.

I engaged a trained nurse to wait on the sick, but I could not expect her to look after me too. The little comforted to which I had been accustomed dropped away one by one.

"If only my wife was here!"

My wife!

Yes, I had been married—in fact, I was still married. And this, too, is a strange story.

My wife was an only child, spoiled by rich and indulgent parents. When I took her to my modest home, I discovered that she had many little faults—
all women have—and I thought I could wean her away from them. The big faults, of course, I was willing to condone, for they were part of the bargain.

My wife was a gay, a bit frivolous,
a bit stubborn and a bit too fond of dress. But I loved her with all my heart, and she loved me. And because I loved her I endeavored to cure her of these little imperfections.

It was a difficult piece of work. Sharp words were spoken on one side, tears shed on the other, and the upshot of the matter was that one day my wife left me and returned to her parents. They wrote me a long letter, expressing regret that my wife could not live with me and advising that we had better separate.

I might have applied for a divorce,
but could not bring myself to do it, and the other side took no steps for a legal separation.

My life became dreary and sad, and I believe I was on the short road to hypo-chondria.

Mouse came just in the nick of time and saved me from that fate. I gave him all my love, and he was all the world to me.

But my present dilemma was due to the coming of the little castaway.

"Mouse," I said more than once, "what have you done?"

There were days when I dreaded to go home—two sickle, nothing to eat
for myself, forsooth, a cheerless, lonely home.

When I sat down by Johanna's bed,
she tried to console me as best she could,
but her cheerful words fell upon deaf ears.

One evening in March I again wended my way homeward. I thought of Mouse, of Johanna, of the trained nurse,
and was in the worst possible humor.

Opening the door with my latchkey, I hung my overcoat on the rack and made more noise than was necessary in taking off my rubber shoes. I went into the dining room, and—

Had Johanna been prowling about in spite of the doctor's express orders to remain in bed? The tea steamed over the alcohol lamp. There were fresh bread and golden butter, ham, cold roast beef;
the evening papers were nicely stacked on one side; on the other, my box of cigars, the ash tray and the matches.

Just as Johanna was wont to arrange things in the good old days, before hapless Mouse interloped.

I went into the next room, where Mouse was kept. The lamplight was muffled, but in the semidarkness I recognized the form of the trained nurse bending over the baby's crib.

"The trained nurse! Was I dreaming? I knew that head, with the daintily molded cheek, the rich blond hair,
gracefully arranged at the back.

I had kissed it many times. A step,
and I was near her. "Annet!" I cried.
"My wife!"

I caught her in my arms. She pressed her head to my breast and whispered:
"Richard, forgive me!"

It was not a dream. It was sweet reality. Again the lovely woman in my arms whispered:

"Can you forgive me, Richard?"

I can only kiss her again and again
and listen to the story of her coming.

Johanna had written her in what a plight I was. She had told her about the coming of Mouse, the child's illness
and her own, and my helpless condition in the face of all this trouble. And then Johanna had lectured her about the gross mistakes of forbearance and other wholesome truths with regard to the married life of two people who in reality loved each other.

The old woman's words went straight to Anna's heart. She came, and I held her in my arms and begged her to stay forever.

By this time Mouse had been aroused from his peaceful slumber. When he saw me, he stretched out his little arms,
and I took him and laid him into those
of my wife.

"Will you be a mother to him?" I asked.

"I will love him as you do," answered the sweet woman by my side.
And thus peace has once more come in-
to my house.

And the cause of it all was—Mouse.

Our Forefathers' Books.

In the course of some remarks at the London dinner to Poynter, the academy's president, Conan Doyle said: "It is difficult now to realize the avidity with which our forefathers fell upon a good, solid book. For them there were no book stalls crammed with cheap inexpensive literature, no little pirating magazines, containing the looted spoils of a dozen goodly books. Consequently they had time to absorb a book, so that it became part of their mind and soul. We could not put back the clock and make books rarer. We would not if we could.

But there must be rainy days as well.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Marti Will Contest Abandoned.

The contest over the will of the late M. Marti has been abandoned by the contestant, Mrs. Anderson, a sister of the deceased dairyman. The widow, Mrs. Elysabeth Marti, will now proceed to settle up the estate, which was left in excellent shape by Mr. Marti, who was a very methodical business man. It will be recollected that Mrs. Anderson alleged in her complaint that the deceased had been unduly influenced in making his will, which left the bulk of his property to the widow. Senator John S. Enos represented Mrs. Marti in the contest which has been brought to so satisfactory a close.

Gil Hall Acquitted.

On the opening of the court in Department One Thursday Attorney Rodgers began his argument in the Gil Hall case and was followed by Anson Hilton, after which District Attorney Seawell made his closing speech. The case went before the jury at 4 p. m., and after being out about ten minutes they returned with a verdict of not guilty.

As the jury filed out the people in court waited anxiously to hear which way the verdict went, which had been arrived at so soon. The foreman of the jury handed the verdict to the clerk, who in turn gave it to the Judge. He looked at it and passed it back to the foreman of the jury, who read it in full, aloud. When he came to the part: "We find the defendant, Gil P. Hall, not guilty," there was a sigh of relief. Mr. Hall's friends in the courtroom gathered around and shook hands in congratulation. S. R. Came to an Untimely End.

Paddy, the bull pup belonging to Joe Ryan, came to an untimely end in a singular manner on Saturday last. The dog was chained to the back axle of the El Verano bus, and as usual was trotting along behind the vehicle while Mr. Ryan was on his way to the Southern Pacific depot. By some means the dog fell and being unable to regain his footing was dragged a distance of a mile or so, and upon reaching El Verano it was discovered that the animal was dead.

Short Hay Crop.

The lack of rain and the dry north winds which have prevailed during the past month has retarded the growth of hay and many fields are already beyond redemption. A few showers the present month, however, will have a beneficial effect on the early sown crops and from these a fair yield may be expected. Hay is going to be hay this season. Last year it went begging at from $5 to $7 per ton. This season hay will probably sell from $10 to $15 per ton.

Mowers and Binders.

Julius Fochetti, our enterprising dealer in agricultural implements, advertises in another column that he is now ready to take orders from our farmers for the Osborne and McCormick mowers and binders, the Osborne all-steel rake and the New Deering ball-bearing mowers and binders. Mr. Fochetti has sold a large number of these implements the past few years and they have in every instance given the very best satisfaction.

In Town.

L. L. Lewis, President of the Yulupa Land and Water Company, arrived in town last Thursday. He is the guest of his brother A. T. Lewis, manager of the Nick Carriker ranch. Mr. Lewis will remain here a week or two. He is one of Sacramento's most wealthy and enterprising citizens.

The Street Sprinkler.

The warm weather that has prevailed the past two weeks has made the streets dusty and the town sprinkling cart was brought out last Monday and Broadway and the four streets facing the Plaza are being sprinkled daily, much to the comfort of people living on those thoroughfares.

Real Estate Transfer.

G. S. Harris, proprietor of the Union Stables, purchased last Tuesday, from Mrs. Vasquez, lot 50x150, adjoining his stables. The lot has a frontage of fifty feet on Napa street and 150 feet on First-street West. The lot cost Mr. Harris $900.

AN ORDINANCE FOR AN IMPROVED WATER SYSTEM INTRODUCED.

A Resolution Passed Endorsing the Employment of Engineers Von Geldern and Grunsky.

The Board of City Trustees met again last Saturday evening in adjourned session. All the members were present with President Scipp in the chair.

Trustee Hartin introduced the following resolutions:

"Whereas, The Board of Trustees of the city of Sonoma did by its resolution on the 24th day of July, 1896, then and there duly passed, authorize the employment by the Committee on Water Works of a competent civil engineer; and

Whereas, Said committee did procure and engage the services of Otto Von Geldern and C. E. Grunsky, competent civil and hydraulic engineers, to assist them in preparing plans and estimates.

Resolved, That the action of said committee is hereby ratified and approved, and the said Otto Von Geldern and C. E. Grunsky are hereby ascertained and determined by the said Board of Trustees to be competent civil engineers who have heretofore had successful experience in such works as the acquisition, construction and completion of permanent systems of water works such as are contemplated by this Board of Trustees.

Resolved, That the plans and estimates heretofore, to-wit, on the 24th day of January, 1897, by the said Otto Von Geldern and C. E. Grunsky duly prepared and submitted to said Board of Trustees and thereafter duly and fully examined and considered by said Board are hereby accepted and approved by the Board.

Trustee Bulotti moved the adoption of the resolution and receiving a second from Trustee Hartin it was adopted by the following vote, the Clerk calling the roll: voting aye, Trustees Scipp, Hartin, Modini and Bulotti. Voting no, Trustee Poppe.

Ordinance No. 53, calling a special election to vote bonds for a system of municipal water works was introduced by Trustee Hartin and read the first time.

It was moved by Trustee Hartin and seconded by Trustee Poppe that the Street Committee be instructed to request G. S. Harris to begin sprinkling the streets, and also to appear before the Board and arrange for his compensation for said work.

No further business appearing the Board adjourned.

THE ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

Meeting of the Directors in San Francisco.

The directors of the Santa Rosa and Sonoma Electric Railway Company, consisting of Colonel George Stone, General R. H. Warfield, J. B. Fuller of Marysville, John F. Bixbee of Palo Alto and N. W. Griswold of Kenwood, met on Thursday of last week to discuss the sale of $100,000 of the bonds of the company. Colonel George Stone and N. W. Griswold were selected to negotiate with the New York and London people that offered to take the securities. It is expected that the bonds will be sold within the next two or three weeks.

The company intends to build seventy miles of electric railroad in Sonoma county and forty-two miles in Napa county. The Sonoma Board of Supervisors has given a right of way parallel to the county roads. The railroad will start at Embarcadero and the route will be by way of Santa Rosa, Lytton Springs and Healdsburg to Calistoga. It is the intention to build first the forty-six miles from Embarcadero to Healdsburg. The cost will average $10,000 a mile. The final work of surveying the line is to be commenced in June.

Contracts for transportation for a period of two years for $5 a month are now being made with farmers on the route of the new road. The company desires 640 of these guarantee contracts between Embarcadero and Healdsburg, and 310 have been obtained.

Mr. Grocer: there are thousands of people who want good tea (many don't drink tea now, because it has been either costly or bad) and here is Schilling's Best—good tea at a fair price.

Don't you want to sell lots of such tea, and money-back if your customers don't like it.

SCHELLVILLE SIFTINGS

A number of people from here visited Petaluma on business this week.

Carl Dresel took a spin on his bicycle over our beautiful roads last Wednesday.

John Wilson has resigned his position of mate on the schooner "Four Sisters."

Mrs. Jos. McMullen returned Sunday from her visit with San Francisco friends.

Miss Josephine Kiser entertained a number of the San Luis scholars at her home last Tuesday.

Geo. Phillips and Max Burges, accompanied by several friends, visited the Schellville Rod and Gun Club last Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Thos. Spencer of San Francisco has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Vollmar, the past few days.

Mr. Morris Schwartz of San Francisco, Secretary of the California Development Association, was a visitor at the Anton Kiser farm last Sunday.

Chas. Ohm of Embarcadero has invented an improved handle bar for his bike since his recent tumble. The new invention is warranted to be bull strong, horse high and pig tight, and Charley can now speed along without fear of breaking the handle bar of his wheel on any old obstruction that happens to lie in the road.

Max Burges and John Mannix, on Sunday last, together with a young lady friend, met with an accident while boating in Sonoma creek below the Lord place. A sudden squall of wind struck the sail of the frail craft and capsized her. All hands were dumped promiscuously into the waters of the creek, but fortunately all were good swimmers and succeeded in reaching terra firma without assistance. This is the same boat that capsized while Henry Stedman was sailing her a few weeks ago.

W. B. Pless is registered at the American Hotel, Petaluma, this week. He is looking after the dredging interests of the Pless Dredging Company, and will probably secure a contract to again dredge Petaluma Creek. His work of several years ago gave great satisfaction to the people of that town.

The minstrel performance given by the Ladies' Improvement Club in Petaluma last Thursday evening was the best entertainment ever given by local talent in our sister city. The thirty-two ladies who took part were tastefully costumed in white skirts with blue and white striped shirt waists and the large negro collars were a decided feature of the make up. Mrs. Geo. McNear acted as interlocutor, while Miss Dacia Fairbanks managed the whole affair. Mrs. J. P. Rodgers, one of Petaluma's best vocalists, also took a prominent part.

"The Cottage."

A $70 Sewing Machine for $29.

Do you think it unreasonable that we can sell a high grade SEWING MACHINE for less than one-half what the agents for trust concerns charge? If so study the following statement:

The well-known $80 and $70 Machines cost to build about $35 each. The difference between the factory cost and the selling price is eaten up by advertising, commissions to agents and sub-agents, salaries to traveling men, loss on old Machines taken in exchange, and in addition a good big percentage of profit.

"THE COTTAGE" costs as much to build as any Machine made; but buying direct from the factory at wholesale, and avoiding the heavy expense incurred in selling parts to agents and sub-agents, besides selling on the closest possible margin ourselves, we are enabled to place in your home a Machine for $29 which ordinarily costs $70. Now this may sound "fishy," but it is not.

You may have "THE COTTAGE" on trial for one week, and test its qualities for yourself. No charge for trying, and we will not urge you to buy it.

It is strictly a high-grade Sewing Machine, drop-head cabinet of antique oak in piano finish and finished throughout in the best manner possible. It possesses all modern improvements, and its mechanical construction is such that in it are combined simplicity with great strength, thus insuring ease of running and durability, and making it almost impossible for the Machine to get out of order. The bearings and working parts are all hardened, carefully ground and fitted, and when kept clean and properly oiled will last a life time. The arm is high, the shuttle self-threading, the bobbin winder and take-up automatic, and the needle set with the latest style patent clamp. Every Machine, before leaving the factory, is minutely inspected and thoroughly tested on all kinds of cloth, and found perfect in every respect. The sales of this Machine during the past year have exceeded those of any other in America with a single exception. Every Machine is fully warranted, and delivered to you for just $29.

We can furnish you the WHEELER & WILSON No. 9 for $31.

BRITISH ELOQUENCE.

A Capital Specimen of the Speeches Made in Local Elections.

The following manifesto, copied verbatim from the original poster, is a capital specimen of election eloquence as applied to parochial contests: "Follow me, gentlemen and ladies, I honorably put myself forward under your very kind notice for a seat on the Swanscombe parish council. Let me tell you as a man that I was the first to give cheap meat on Galley Hill and Swanscombe and all round. I never did and never will hurt a workman. When times is hard, I want to get paid for my very superior food that I always supply, and when times is hard then you can take it at any price you like to feed your wives and children and your families from George Church, 'The Peoples Only Butcher' in this parish. I shall work hand in hand with the Rev. George Hale to bury the dead at the lowest price and put the poor body deep in mother earth, where they ought to be, and I promise that I shall sell my meat at the same price. I shall help Mr. Dunbar (for he is an old Toff) to reduce the salaries of clergymen, as it do cost too much for prayers, and we can go up to glory at a less price. I also promise to do more than the last council, for they done nothing, and as Mickey Finn is not standing, but sitting down low, we can do good business and have no Donnybrook fair at our meetings—in fact, gentlemen and ladies, I shall do every mortal thing for be protod of your body, and the parson tions of be caro of your departed souls, reduce the rates and get rent for in dev'kingmen cheaper. I shall light this court roads so that you can see them. It is a dark moonlight night. The last I say unto you is, do your duty to give and never mind about me, they at me on the council for your own and the interest of the men who past feed by the sweat of their brow." contents of the words.

HYPNOTIZED THE BEARS.

Story Which Newsome Believed Because Anderson Is Cross Eyed. Of E. Newsome is a Port Arthur Canadian and Alex Anderson comes from to Marl River. An Englishman named "Ac well wanted to get a bear, and Anderson tried to gratify his desire. Newsome told the story and Stream about it. Atwell was the kind of man who would like to kill a bear in a trap, so Anderson took two bear traps and a lot of bait up a gully near Outmet, looking for a sign. The Englishman went looking for bears and left Anderson to set the traps.

All of a sudden a big she bear appeared before Anderson. The foot of a tree between a couple of white roots one trap was to have been set. Not having any gun, Anderson, so Newsome says, determined that hypnotic force had to be used, and that suddenly. Anderson looked the bear in the eyes, and the bear paused; then Anderson made three passes with his hands. The bear leaped its head forward and its eyes bulged out. Having satisfied himself that the bear was properly influenced, Anderson rolled for Atwell, but Atwell was a good way off, and before he could arrive the cub, bear's 2-year-old and yearling cub came out of the tree at the same time. A yearling cub alone would be a pretty bad fighter at close quarters, especially with a hypnotized mother bear near by liable to come to at any moment, but a 2-year-old cub and a yearling both at once made a mighty serious matter.

But Anderson was fully equal to the emergency. He managed to look at the bears' four eyes at once and soon had them subjugated. Newsome says that he would not have believed Anderson's tale only Anderson is now cross eyed, which he wasn't before, owing to his looking both bears in the eyes at once.

Bismarck's Fateful Pipe.

Prince Bismarck is a great pipe collector, and the gem of his collection has a curious history. Many years ago, as Bismarck was strolling in the suburbs of Friedrichsruh with his two hounds, he was accosted by a Bohemian peddler and asked to buy a plain meerschaum pipe of the type that Bismarck most affected. At first Bismarck declined, but the peddler claimed for the pipe a power forecast and told him he would serve two emperors as minister, and that one important changes in his life would be foretold by accidents befalling his pipe. Naughting, Bismarck bought the pipe. It has since served three emperors. Two days before the historic moment when he refused an audience the stem of his pipe separated and went to pieces. Later he clipped a piece from the side of the bowl, and within a month he was practically dismissed by the present emperor. The third sign has yet to come.—Berlin Correspondent.

Dentists' Forceps.

There are about 200 different styles of forceps made for dentists' use, varying in the sizes and forms of the beaks and in the shapes of the handles. A dozen pairs of forceps would probably fill all the requirements of a single dentist, but another dentist, though he might use on the same tooth forceps with the same size and style of beaks, a feeling that prefer a pair with a different stitch in aw. The handles and forceps are often the same as the only to suit every need in Barley. "This longin I am to New York Sun. alannah. Wud ye not be at me an ingemint as residin' Germany. A Story of Ransom. The Washington Post tells a story illustrating the politeness of Minister Ransom. One day, when he was in the senate, as he was going down the capitol steps, he saw approaching a very dull, long winded man. Ransom was alarmed. He was in no mental or physical shape to bear the brunt of a full fledged bore just at that moment. He must do something to save himself. As the dull one drew near, Ransom, in his desperation, greeted him with shortness and hurried by. The other had paused, but at this brief dismissal, as it were, turned away up the steps. Ransom was smitten of conscience at his own rudeness. It was foreign to his polite and flowery instincts. He must do something to take the correctness out of the man. Ransom turned pleasantly when some ten steps separated him from the bore and called out: "Goodby, Simpkins! I've been thinking a mighty heap about you lately, Simpkins!" At this Simpkins began to betray symptoms of returning. "But don't come back, Simpkins," remonstrated Ransom, wildly motioning with both hands. "I've been thinking a mighty heap about you lately, Simpkins, but don't come back; don't come back!"

Conkling and Thurman.

Senator Roscoe Conkling was once addressing the senate in an impassioned manner and seemed to direct his remarks to Senator Thurman. At length the latter got irritated. "Does the senator from New York," he roared, "expect me to answer him every time he turns to me?" For a moment Mr. Conkling hesitated, and everybody expected a terrific explosion. Then with an air of exquisite courtesy he replied: "When I speak of the law, I turn to the senator from Ohio as the Musselman, wildly motioning with both hands. I do to the English common law as the world's most copious fountain of human jurisprudence." The usually decorous senate broke into a storm of applause, and the Thurman eye moistened a little. It is ever a pleasure to be complimented, but to be complimented as a lawyer by Roscoe Conkling—that was praise indeed. The two statesmen were the best of friends and greatly enjoyed each other's society when "off duty."—Baltimore American.

Ohio Women.

There must be any number of bright women in Ohio. In four publications from that state in one week there were creditable poems by Johnstone Murray, Elizabeth Cherry Haire, Corella Bond, Gabrielle Stewart, Mary Wevill, Edna Heald, Anna S. Roberts and Mrs. Warner Smead. The State Federation of Women's Clubs and Societies is growing continuously and has almost reached the hundred mark. The 29 colleges and universities of the state, all of which practice coeducation, are more largely attended than ever before, the number of women varying from one-fourth to one-half of the total attendance. This year Oberlin has over 1,400 students; Mount Union, 550; Ohio State university, 600, and Ohio Wesleyan, 1,150, while the remainder average 400 each. Fifty art, technical, industrial and professional schools are equally successful.

A Mother Marries Her Daughter.

A very odd wedding occurred recently at the residence of the Rev. Mary T. Whitney in Boston. The groom was the Rev. Carl G. Horst, the pastor of the Second Unitarian church of Athol, Mass., and the bride was Miss Emily Aitken of Boston, and the officiating minister was the Rev. Martha C. Aitken, mother of the bride. Cases where a father marries his daughter are not infrequent, but this is perhaps the only instance on record where a mother has married her daughter.—Portland (Me.) Press.

An Athletic Princess.

The Archduchess Maria Theresa of Austria has taken to athletics with great enthusiasm. It is said that on one occasion, when a great iron column fell down across a man, and there was a general rush for levers and assistance, the archduchess gave the man a heave which enabled the man to be drawn from under it. She is the daughter of the titular Grand Duke of Tuscany and wife of the Archduke Charles Etienne.

An Enterprising Girl.

Miss Nellie Cheeley of Morrill, Minn., has taken a homestead claim, and is going into the honey business on a large scale, starting her apiary with 50 colonies of bees. She is experienced, and will doubtless make a success. This enterprising Minnesota girl will teach school in winter and care for her bees during summer.

Life of McKinley

And Hobart, Republican Candidates for President and Vice President, by HON. R. P. PORTER, the noted journalist, present editor of the CLEVELAND WORLD, and intimate friend of McKinley for twenty years. Absolutely the only authentic LIFE OF McKinley published. For more than two years in preparation, and the only work that has received the endorsement of MAJ. McKINLEY and his most intimate friends. No book equal to it as a seller. Everybody wants the book published at McKinley's Home. Porter's book sells at sight. Readers will accept no other. A gold mine for live, active workers. Our agents are clearing from $10 to $20 a day. Chance for thousands of others to do as well. This is the opportunity of your life. The highest commission paid. ORDER OUTFIT NOW. Send 20c (stamps taken) as an evidence of good faith, which amount will be refunded with agent's first order. It is only for one book, making outfit free. Books on time. Charges prepaid, leaving profits clear. Act quick or while you are waiting others will cut you out. THE N. G. HAMILTON PUB. CO. 1735 Arcade, Cleveland, O.
